ABOUT CONFERENCE

In this fast moving world, engineering and management students need to be trained to manage the changes, complexities and uncertainties of the modern world. Designing sustainability into practical solutions is now a pillar of modern engineering and management education. The idea is to meet the needs of the present day without compromising the needs of future generations.

The engineering and management curriculum is already very crowded with important ‘core’ engineering and management subjects. So finding space within the engineering and management curriculum to embed topics with relevance to the global challenges is a challenge in itself. However, the importance of these global skills is now being reflected in government policy in engineering and management education. With this objective Sanjivani Rural Education Society organizes Two days National Level Seminar on “Emerging Innovations and Strategic Business Practices”. This Seminar will bring together researchers, academicians, business professionals, technocrats and students from all over globe. The conference will also have key addresses by experts in the different fields.
