About the Conference:
The world recently remembered a decade old Financial Crisis triggered by fall of Lehman Brothers, while staring at a new crisis-like situation. However, the global geo-political crisis we are witnessing today is not the only crisis we have come across in the 21st century. Surprisingly, the year 2000 began with the technology bubble and its contagion effects on the financial markets. First decade of the 21st century was featured by terrorist attacks, war on terror, Ponzi schemes and financial meltdowns.

The crisis that we are facing today does not have resemblance with crisis of 2008 though the outcome will be of equal proportions or will have even greater and more dangerous long term impact. The world is facing lot of economic and political disruptions causing creation of multiple shockwaves leading to severe movements in the financial markets, international trade and world development.

Present turmoil in the world is caused by the trade war between USA and China, rising Oil Prices and escalating tensions between Russia and USA. The world is also experiencing extreme weather conditions causing natural calamities of unprecedented scale resulting into damages of serious nature. The decade also witnessed a large scale migration as fallout of war-like situations in terror-struck nations like Syria, Afghanistan etc. Large scale migration from poor to rich nations created newer demographic and socio-cultural problems for the nations that are at the receiving ends.

Thus, the world is shaking as a result of the developments of the last decade and the absurd events of the present day. The markets and the economies are rattling due to increasing uncertainties, changing stance of the leader nations and unwillingness of the nations to deal with the problems collectively. On this slippery and shaky background a silver-lining is that India being the largest market economy is expected to play a key role in bringing back the world to the basics. Presently we find ourselves in unknown territories and it is becoming increasingly difficult to predict what we will come across going forward.

To deliberate upon developments after the last economic crisis and possible impact of these developments on the world and India in particular, we have organized a One Day Inter-Disciplinary International Conference on the theme ‘New Pathways to World Development – Opportunities and Challenges’. We invite researchers and academicians to get enlightened by the eminent speakers and also to participate in the process of evolving solutions to problems faced by contemporary world through research paper presentations.

The research papers on socio-economic, political and cultural impacts of the present global events are invited. Following themes are illustrative although not exhaustive and researchers are free to present original research papers on any aspect relating to main theme of the Conference. The experts from the field of Environment, Economics and Political Analysis are expected to enlighten the audience.

Themes for Research Paper Presentations:

- Trade wars and globalization
