1. INTRODUCTION:

Anger is common enemy which has been existed within us since very beginning of our childhood. It is character or feature that every living creature in this earth carries with them the only difference is expressing it. Therefore, anger is anxiety or a strong feeling of displeasure, resentment or annoyance towards something. The triggers to anger are trauma, injustice, lake of appreciation, revenge, vengeance and so on. In scientific terms, anger is an impulsive disorder trigger by the various attributes such as unfairness, injustice, less appropriation which results rage or wrath whereas psychologist define anger as primary and natural phenomenonemotionally expressed by person through body language and facial expression or by public acts of aggression. Uncontrolled anger can sometime have devastating effects not only for individual but for the nation or some time for whole world one best example can be world war II which arose due to extreme suppression of German people at 1st world war and one person with holding their anger and rage into devastating destruction of mankind.

2. LITERATURE REVIEW:

In our so call modern society with advance technology anger and violence has been common every now and then. Many called religion and beliefs are the reason behind terrorism and blame Islam as religion for promoting terrorism but if we analyze it is not so. Since Muhaiyaddeen, M. B. (2004) in his book named "Islam & World Peace: Explanations of a Sufi" has explained core of religion which state that anger is consider as devil in islam and violence are not consider at any angle. Likewise, in book called "The Better Angels of Our Nature " by Pinker, S. (2011) consider the fall behind empire is rage and anger so if we have to flourish prospeti and peace in world then anger within an individual must be ended and feelings for revel and revenge should be bycott from us.

4. DISCUSSION:

Defining Anger in Different Religion

➤ Christianity:

- a) Catholic: Extreme anger is listed in bottom of all sins and is considered as the seven deadliest sins of Catholicism if anger is directed towards people which is also shown in fresco of saint Nicolas Orthodox church painted in 1717 AD in Pernik province, Bulgaria while some catholic such as Henri J.M. Nouwen sees anger from positive side and address anger as hatred directly to God we will know the fullness of his love and our freedom (Nouwen, 1979). Thus, Catholic defines anger as positive as well as negative emotion prevailing in humanbeing.

b) Protestant: Anger for God deepen the relationship with God which is shown in Book of Ruth, Book of Exodus, Book of Job and so on but all the book defined anger as honest friend and ally which guide human being towards closer attachment to God.

➤ Judaism:

Anger in negative emotion or is taken as cursed and regarded as fierce and cruel attributes inside human being (Singer, 1960). In Judaism, it is believed that the person who is not angry and love and care everyone can conquer world. Anger therefore is portrayed as evil within mankind in this religion.

➤ Hinduism:

Anger in Hindu religion is reveals as the signs of ignorance which further destroyed the individual and surrounding within. The anger is also listed as evil power and is hindrance to the gratification of desires which ultimately provide individual with more pain (MahaSwamiji). Hindu holy book Bhagavad Gita consider anger as the cause of destruction therefore people must be free from anger since anger is reason for sorrow it further elaborate anger cause due to frustration of material desires(Gyatso, 2007).

➤ Buddhism:

Anger in Buddhism is regarded as the source of hindrances and is regarded as destructive emotions and therefore need to be purify and transform by self(The Urban Dharma Newsletter, 2004).The Buddhism sees angry person is one who does not consider any religion and is dissatisfied from everything.

➤ Islam:

Anger is instigated by Satan and is revival as the part of person who does not follow Quran and is consider as enemy of Islam (Muhaiyaddeen, 2004). Therefore, anger is considered as the beginning of madness and ultimately ends in regrets. Anger is also taken as the means which stop person reaching to God.

Although all the religion took similar stand in the anger but in recent days' world is slowly detreating its humanity and brotherhood by anger and wrath which in inside with in us due to which many terror attack has been seen every now and then. The causes of many wars happening is due to vengeance and revenge which are enlisted as research paper proceed.

5. ANALYSIS:

Rage of War Due to Anger

The conflict rages out with extreme anger which result in war there are many war which has been devastating for those era with massive human casualty. Among them some are as follows:

- Lushan Rebellion: The ultimate example of anger and its devastating effect can be seen in the Lushan Rebellion which happens in 755 to 763AD this war is the result of extreme suppression done by Tang dynasty at its peak. Nearly 36 million people loss there life which is 2/3rd of Northern Chinese population of the empire (Pinker, 2011).
- The 30 years' war: In period of 1618 to 1648 war broke down between catholic and protestant states around Europe. Although, both the religion considers anger to be evil but disrespect for each other and extreme anger is the main reason behind the 30years' brutal war. Nearly 8 million, people died in this bloody battle and outrageous people with two distinct branch of religion from common root fight this battle.
- Napoleonic Wars: The chronological conflicts between the French Empire and its colonies which result the estimated life of nearly 6 million people is also the result of French dominance and their vengeance and anger dispersion on the war which was fought between 1803 to 1815 AD which lasted for 12 years, 5 months and 4 weeks. This war happens due to ideological clash and conservative system which rose anger resulting conflict and destroying everything (Stoker, Schneid, & Blanton, 2008).
- World War I: Although, there are many reason for happening of this great war but notably most immediate reason is anger of one Bosnian Serb Yugoslav nationalist naming Gavrilo Princip assassinated the Austro-Hungarian heir Archduke Ferdinand which leads to July crisis and later what happen still hunts us leading to massive war resulting on death of 50 to 100 million death as a result of war and diseases cause afterwards (Otte, 2015). This bloody battle was fought for 1914 to 1918 for around 4 years, 3 months and 2 weeks just to show ego and power giving outrageous anger in enemy resulting more and more dead bodies.
- World War II: The main reason behind 2nd world war was the anger of Germany which has been lightens by Hitler powerful merciless leadership destroying everything. There was multiple reason for violence but the main factors behind the war is anger that is inside heart of Germany due to the embracement of 1st World War as Versailles Treaty. The war started at 1939 AD as anger from Germany to Poland later resulting to death of over death of 70 million people.

- Iraqi war: After two massive wars also world has not learned any lesson and fighting vengeance war. The Iraq war from 2003 to 2011 is the best example of anger war first for snatching oil from neighbour but slowly war turn out to be vengeance and the world massive mobilizing terror organization in recent days such as ISIS and al-Qaida are its bi products. If only the war has not been happened the rise of such extremist groups was not possible.
- Syrian War: Recent war in Syria and use of chemical weapon killing children this all has been happening in Syria due to anger. The war starts at 2011 AD in early spring by wave of protests slowly in turn out the protest demanding eradication of President Bashar al-Assad who in his anger responded violently escalating death of about 250 thousand people already and since protest is still going on we can only thing the number will be raise by coming years.
- Others: The dark side of world has been seen since many countries raising violence rather than coping up for peaceful establishment of global village due to their anger or greed. Currently, War in Donbas happening between Ukraine and Russia; Civil War of Yemen; Mexican Drug war are going on which are some of the example of war due to anger in world.

The world should understand before going on any war that those who are angry will be happy again and those who are wrathful will be cheerful again, but a nation which are destroyed in the war cannot exist again and people who already die cannot be brought back therefore lesson must be learn not to be angry because war is for collapse not for peace (Tzu, 1963).

6. CONCLUSION:

The global peace can be achieve if all the rebellions as well as political party come on the common stand and free their mind from anger and violence taking oath for establishment of global village. The end of war are possible only if entire countries is able to establish common ground for hearing voices of people on suppression and be able to establish playground for all in anger free environment. The anger can lead to violence but the effort made by countries like North Korea to seek peace from table talk with US can be consider as best possible way for ultimate peace which is positives for establishment of global village. Formation of European Union is another positive for global peace since it not only help them to enhance business but establish friendly diplomatic relation between nations which is solution for any conflict arise within them. Likewise, treaty of world free from chemical weapon and focus on program of sustainable development project by setting Millennium goal are some best approach adopted by world to enrich global peace. World has already seen many great battle now all the countries should flow their mind on innovation and progress rather than wasting energy on mass production of war machines. The countries like Bhutan and Belgium who has taken stand for neutrality can always guide world in path of progress otherwise with so many weapons and anger in people mind set next war is just a door outside. Dream of global village will be reality on the day when anger does not have any place in world.
